Sources: https://www.cbr.com/ and https://www.wikipedia.org/

Song 1: https://youtu.be/iy3qq7zc4EY?si=4FfC7EBgXEJDsmyk

Reason: "Ground Theme" wasn't just the music heard in Super Mario Bros.' first level or the Mario franchise's theme song; it was arguably the theme song for video games as a whole. Besides sounding like a childlike wonder and being repetitive, Ground Theme was so iconic that it was used or referenced by almost everything related to gaming, whether it was connected to the '80s classic Super Mario Bros. or not.

Song 2: https://youtu.be/G-i8HYi1QH0?si=lpB5IMaecd4sJ-9J

Reason: When Sonic was introduced to this song, Green Hill Zone became one of the biggest earworms in gaming history, so it somehow made it the Unoffical/Offical theme for Sonic as a whole. It was always remixed when the classic Sonic level was homaged, or remixed for jokes, memes, or stories you may've heard, wink wink.

Song 3: https://youtu.be/PZ_7ipJ6Cx8?si=GFrUkrX6ux_tVXia

Reason: The Final Fantasy "Victory Theme" has since become one of the biggest earworms in gaming history because of how synonymous to winning, with and without the original context, that even those who never played a Final Fantasy game recognized it. Part of the fun of keeping up with Final Fantasy was hearing each entry's spin on the fanfare.

Song 4: https://youtu.be/xSHYFQ_LUIk?si=zUtg69gNFuqHz2vd

Reason: The original Halo: Combat Evolved featured the 8-minute "Truth and Reconciliation Suite." At its longest, the famous "Warthog Run" comprised only 3 minutes of the whole suite. The rousing earworm complemented the run so well that gamers often replayed the level just to relive the rush. The titular run was homaged across Halo games, complete with remixes of one of the biggest earworms in gaming history.

Song 5: https://youtu.be/ZNGqBDRJgvo?si=QfB1Bu73JTTLJmly

Reason: The song was the perfect musical match to Persona 5's unique story and style, and one of the biggest earworms in gaming history. Whenever Persona 5's fight sequences were spoofed online or referenced in some way, the jazzy Last Surprise accompanied it. Even outside Persona 5's turn-based fights, Last Surprise was an earworm that was almost impossible to forget, let alone ignore. Last Surprise wasn't Persona 5's actual theme song, but it might as well have been.

Song 6: https://youtu.be/0FCvzsVlXpQ?si=5oWDCLn0LbJHY-AU

Reason: From an Earthbound ROM hack to a Homestuck Comic, to the high-energy final boss theme in Undertale, Megalovania became a popular earworm that went on to other appearances in games like Super Smash Bros. Ultimate and Taiko no Tatsujin: Drum 'n' Fun. But it wasn’t just games; it became such a popular earworm that remixes/covers were made on the web, and it slowly went into mainstream media, television programs, and was covered by figures like Jack Black. Its cultural footprint was formally recognized in January 2024 when Guinness World Records certified "Megalovania" as the most-streamed video game soundtrack on Spotify, surpassing 161 million streams from gamers and a general audience alike.